Acknowledgments

Acknowledgments

This thesis represents one part of my PhD experience. I would like this acknowledgments section to go some way towards recognizing, more widely, all the people who contributed to my technicoloured PhD experience. Not only those directly influenced my thinking and writing in this book, but to those who defined the milieu of my PhD, as gezellig. Looking back on my time in Groningen, I feel incredibly blessed. Writing a thesis has the potential to be a lonely affair, but because I was fortunate enough to find myself immersed in such a wonderful group of people, this could never be my fate. You all made this a very special phase in my life, and deserve so much more appreciation than I can fit here.

I feel so lucky to have worked in such a (multidimensionally) great department. This may just be ingroup favouritism talking, but I feel like our department hits the top of the competence and warmth dimensions. I really consider it a privilege to have been able to work beside some of the great names -- and I think future great names-- in the field, to pick their brains in lab meetings, exchange thoughts at lunch times, and share drinks on Friday afternoons (or sometimes earlier!). So, many thanks to all members of the SPT lab group (2011-2016), the lunch crew (most notably being Kai, without whom we would all have starved long ago), and the dedicated Minnaar group (Russell, Toon, Pontus, Lonneke, Yingqiu, the PhD cohort and experimental crew, Berry, Florian, Nadine, Nico, Rob, Tassos, and King Wisnu). And thank you to our lovely secretaries Anita, Barbara, Dianna, and Mariska who have kindly endured any number of stupid questions from me and are always so sweet and welcoming. I really think it is beautiful how open and friendly everyone in the department is. I feel I have shared a lot with you, so thank you all for making the department feel like home.

I of course also have a number of people who I would like to thank more specifically. At the top of the list being my wonderful supervisors, Martijn van Zomeren and Tom Postmes. Tom, outside of my family you are the person who has the single biggest impact on my life. You were the influence that brought me to Groningen. You have seeded an enthusiasm in me for science and helped give me the tools to pursue this: You have taught me the art of inspiration, ignited in me a passion for methods, crazy ideas and have taught me how to harness them, and also have a good laugh along the way! I am incredibly grateful for the pivotal role you have played in my research: You have always supported and encouraged me, through all the high risk, challenging projects, and have always had a great faith in and enthusiasm for my research, which always felt so important to me. Martijn, you have been an indescribably brilliant supervisor. I have learnt so much from you, to not simply write a scientific paper but to communicate my ideas, you have pushed me to (relentlessly) question my scientific ideas, and in doing so helped me to look more deeply into scientific problems, pushing for clear definitions, refined theory, and alignment of theory and methods. Thank you for the interesting thoughts and discussions, and ridiculously fast and thorough feedback: You always prioritized my academic development and this helped me to achieve more than I thought was possible in this time. Martijn and Tom, you both really helped me to get the best out of my PhD, so many thanks!

I also want to also give a special mention to my amazing PhD cohort. Aafke, Anne Marthe, Bart, Bibiana, Cobus, Darya, Hedy, Julia, Jolien, Kim, Leonie, Maja, Marloes, Namkje, Tomas and Wim. You are the people that I have come to daily for wisdom, comfort, and/or distraction and hilarity! I have so many, special memories, with each of you that there are too many to list in just one place: Lazy Sunday brunches, Ginginya addictions (Anne-Marthe, Jolien, Maja), Sinterklaas game creators (Bart & Anne Marthe) and experience makers (All), mad hatters (specifically at Carnival with Julia, Maja, Aafke, Marloes, Jan, but also perhaps more generally), movie script writing, scavenger hunts which filled my house with rubbish, hen parties, discovering the curiosities of Gossip Girl and countless dinners and awesome parties, topping the list being the notorious awkward party (Cobus & Maarten), and literal housewarming! You have allowed me to push you through the department on an office chair when you were feeling lazy (Julia), set your hair on fire in accidental celebration (Maja), and gone Christmas jumper mad with me (Leonie, Anne Marthe, Jolien, Aafke). You guys really did make my PhD!

Anne Marthe/hammy platter, fellow Giginya and Harry Potter obsessive, you are so incredibly sweet and loyal, a trusted source of advice and funny stories, I will never be able to think of David Hasselhoff or the certain emoticons without thinking of you. Bibiana, the resident stampot specialist, I have so much enjoyed spending time with you, you are wonderfully sincere, kind and such a soothing presence; Bart, you can always be counted on to inject fun (apples/potatoes or Christmas boobs) into the conversations, and sometimes also offense! Though it is a shame that you are such a terrible house guest that I have to leave the city every time you come to visit; Cobus, always a breath of fresh air, a great wit and energizing presence; Darya, you can always be counted for a kind word, funny story or good ribbing; Hedy, always so open, friendly, and of course colourful; Julia, you have cooked the most amazing food (set to ever improve now with Italian input I'm sure), shown me the most hilarious and bizarre youtube videos and told me stories for which I have a flash bulb memory; Jolien, we have been sledging on tea trays together, crafternooning, and coconspirator of many diabolical schemes (Bartopoly, visits to Utopia etc) - you are a one woman whirlwind, quick witted and footed/handed (tidying my house up when people are over and I blink!); Kim, I'm so glad you came to Groningen, and weren't scared away by all the group weirdness! You are so sweet and empathetic, and I have always felt very connected to you (my fellow social networker); Leonie, I always greatly enjoyed our run ins and extracurricular drinking, you are the partner in my favourite ever end to a drink out (discussing how we were awkward conversation makers that could never think of a new conversation theme - I laughed the whole way home); Marloes, you are so thoughtful and kind, and can always be counted on, there are a thousand kindnesses from you that I could mention – you are always ready to lend a sympathetic ear; Namkje, too many accolades to mention, including the award for the most awards(!) and most elegant dance in a fountain, you were such a sweet and lovely office mate, and are a sweet and lovely friend; Wim, it was great to kick off the PhDs together, although we did not spend as much time together as I would have liked during the PhD I will always hold you in high regard for being such a thoughtful (and compassionate?!) guy. Although not in my PhD cohort, as a long suffering Wing neighbor I feel that Toon also deserves a special mention as you have endured a lot at the hands of the Daily Wing editing staff always with good humour and have also managed to throw in some words of wisdom along the way; Russell, my powernymph, and enigma - intellectual heavy weight and venga boys fan - thanks for your interesting c(h)ats, good humour, and for lugging the heaviest box up the stairs when Tomas and I moved house!

And still I need to give a further extra special thanks to my three wonderful para- and rogue-nymphs. Aafke, I'm so glad the fates brought us together as office mates. You kept me sane... or maybe turned me into the inverse?! Predictably unpredictable: You are wonderfully odd and quirky, and can always be counted on to come up with a bizarre plan or support the escalation of mine. Too many shenanigans to mention for fear of getting you fired! Living in cupboards, tables of contents, the week of shame, co-founder of the Daily Wing. The elf yourself video we made will be my happy place for years to come. On days when I couldn't look at drafts or data one more time, your company pulled me back to the office. Maja, we made it through the wilderness of ReMa and PhD together! You have been absolutely pivotal in all the key moments in my academic development - writing our first symposium, my first conference, first conference presentation. And beside all of this, you have been an amazing emotional support and friend. Not only did you really get me through some difficult moments but you also made other moments so much brighter. Finally, Tomas, my unofficial third supervisor. No one else could have possibly helped me more. There were times I could have dissolved without you. You have given me constant support, encouragement, insight and inspiration. I could not ever possibly thank you enough.

To those outside the department, but still very much part of my experience, Andres, Adrian, Charlotte, Dorinde, Felix, Roxi, Elena. The ivory sheep - Florian and Cam - who I learnt so much from at EASP Summer School. And of course thanks to the wanders, who in their all too fleeting time at Groningen left their marks. Greg, Zan, and Ruthie, who was the architect of perhaps one of my favorite nights of fateful drinking and singing in Tel Aviv. Your endless appreciation of animals will be endlessly appreciated by me! And to my life coach Dobby thanks for getting me out of the house and showing me the sheer joy of chasing leaves, birds or my own tail!

Beyond the bubble of Groningen, I would like to thank my lovely U.K. bound friends, Becci, Marcus, Natasha, Jay, Ruth, Alida, Anna, Amanda, Hannah, Ian, Katie, Sarah, Tora. It always gives me so much joy and energy to see you all, thank you for sticking around despite the distance and even managing to make it over to visit on occasion! Also with a special thanks to Alida for designing a beautiful front cover and artistically engaging with my scientific ideas with such beautiful insight; it has been really wonderful to connect with you over this project. Finally, I want to say a big thank you to my wonderful family, the Zwinkels, and Turner-Clan, who from their more distant post were always ready to offer endless support and appreciation, and put strange objects on their head when I prattled on about unintelligible scientific curiosities. You energized me when I felt low and, with perfect comedic timing brought me (Felicatron the highlighting monster) down when I was over the top. It truly is such a gift to have such a sweet family, partner, parents, siblings, grandparents who are endlessly proud of you. There is something incredibly beautiful about the love and appreciation which keeps a rather unbecoming graduation photo of me up on the wall at my parents' and grandparents' house, or a printed copy of my papers at the bedside of my wonderful Grampy Watson. You all make me melt with love and dissolve with laughter. You have always been far more sure of my capabilities than I ever could be of myself, thank you for allowing at least some small degree of your faith to rub off on me.
